

President's Column

Lori and I just returned home from the "Spring Time in the Rockies" Caravan. For anyone who has not yet been on an international caravan, but wants to try one, this is a great one to try. It's fairly short at 26 days, and the starting point in Estes Park, CO is only a few days drive from Northern California. The Caravan made stops at Garden of the Gods, Gunnison, Colorado River State Park, Dinosaur National Monument, Grand Teton National Park, and Yellowstone National Park. These locations offered many great opportunities for hiking, biking, wildlife viewing, and sightseeing. Optional organized caravan activities included biking down 14,000 foot Pikes Peak, and river rafting nine miles on the Green River with amazing canyon views and sections of class III rapids. Like many others on the Caravan, we extended our trip to visit Glacier National Park before heading home. It was truly a memorable adventure, only made better by sharing the experience with two fellow NorCal rigs, plus all the new friends we made during the Caravan. We highly recommend it!

In other news, no one volunteered to host the rally at High Sierra RV Park in Oakhurst. We have therefore decided to try something new by making this a "no-host" rally. I have seen other clubs offer no-host rallies, but I believe this is something new for NorCal. We won't charge a rally fee with the coupon, therefore no welcome bags, organized meals or tours. This rally will offer you a chance to get out with your Airstream, and to enjoy each other's company. We will still gather for happy hour each evening, and celebrate birthdays and anniversaries in true NorCal style. The High Sierra RV Park is only about 14 miles from the south entrance to Yosemite National Park, so remember to bring your Park Pass.

We've been notified that PayPal will raise their rates effective on August 2nd, 2021, and institute a split fee structure depending on whether you use PayPal or a separate credit card. This split fee system makes it very difficult for the Club to pre-calculate fees, causing confusion for members, the registrar and treasurer. The good news is that Airstream Club HQ has already implemented a new banking system for online transactions called Converge offered thru US Bank. It is cheaper than PayPal, with no split fees. We will implement the change for NorCal as soon as testing for the clubs is complete and it becomes available to us. In the meantime, the Club will be suspending all online rally payments for the next several rallies. You are still encouraged to register online, but pay via check.

Starting July 1st, HQ changed the Airstream Club membership period from a calendar year to an anniversary year. There's no change for current members - we all will have the same anniversary date of January 1st for renewals. New members who join after July 1st will be on a true anniversary schedule. For example if as member joins

From The Editor

It is officially mid-summer, the high season for Airstreaming. Even though there was no rally in July, I have heard that many of you have taken your own trips to various locales. Besides the Bibby's seven week trip to the Rockies and back, the Smithsons and others made it to Lebanon, Tennessee, for the WBCCI International Rally. Hedda sent back a teaser photo of NorCal's delegate presenting the flag during the opening ceremonies when all Regions and Units/Clubs present their flags for display while the Rally is in session. See page 12. Steve and Yoshi Deiwert, the Echols and the Maffei had a fun trip in and around U.S. 395 in Southern California. See their story starting on page 9. The Verdegalls are on their trip to Wisconsin for the EEA Air Venture show, while the Christies are on a lengthy trip through Oregon and Washington State that Jim is meticulously documenting on Facebook. I'm sure there are many more NorCalers Airstreaming out there, creating their own adventures.

Ed and I are staying at home this summer due to some other commitments, so I like hearing about what others are doing. If you took a trip and would like to share the highlights as Steve has done, just contact me or submit an article and photos. We are looking forward to getting back in our Airstream for the Angel's Camp Rally in September, then on to the Region Rally in Paso Robles for a double rally hit.

Dave Williams submitted a nice summary on the McCloud rally in early June. Such a beautiful location for a rally! That starts on page 6, with plenty of photos. The weather really cooperated, although Mount Shasta was mostly hidden by the cloud cloak she creates for herself. We have the coupon on page 5 for the High Sierra/Oakdale rally, our October rally, that actually starts at the end of September. This will be a no-host rally, but as the summary suggests, there is plenty to do and see in the area. And there is always our famous Happy Hour, host or no-host.

Hopefully all things Airstream are going well for you and yours. See you down the road!

Your Poppy
Editor.

NorCal's October Rally is happening in the scenic central California town of Oakhurst, at the High Sierra RV Park. Located on the banks of the Fresno River in Madera County, due east of Merced, this RV park has full hook ups and lovely scenery. Perfect to enjoy in or out of your Airstream! The RV park is 14 miles from the south entrance to Yosemite National Park, which naturally is the big draw in the area. (Bring your all-access pass if you have one.) But there are many activities beyond or after visiting Yosemite.

Check out the Talking Bear Statute as you drive through Oakhurst – it will be on your left as you drive east to the RV Park. Want wine? Not only is there a Madera Wine Trail for various wineries in the area, but Idle Hour Winery and Kitchen is open, serving lunch and Sunday Brunch (only) besides offering tastings of their Rhone wines. Want Beer? There are several breweries in the area, with Southgate Brewing Company gaining top reviews on Trip Advisor. Want history? The Fresno Flats Historical Park fits the bill. It is a living history museum based on two original 19th century houses dating back to the 1870s (soon after the Civil War) that have been fully restored and furnished.

Also, the Wassama Round House State Historic Park is worth visiting. Want shopping? Oakhurst and other nearby towns such as Fish Camp have boutique and gift stores, antique and thrift stores, art galleries, etc. Want food? There are 36 restaurants within three miles of Oakhurst, not to mention major grocery stores such as Vons and Raleys.

There is a local cinema playing first run movies (Yosemite Cinema) and of course hiking galore, not only in Yosemite Park, but outside of it as well. Boat rentals are available in nearby Bass Lake. For more scenery, the Sierra Vista Scenic Byway takes you back into some rugged and less explored parts of the Sierra Nevada Mountain Range.

This will be a no-host rally, so there is no rally fee, goodie bags, pre-planned group or catered meals or planned activities. Whomever participates will be free to craft their own experience. A very nice location to get away and do exactly that!

Every McCloud has a Silver Lining.

Another tremendous Airstream Rally was held at the park-like setting of McCloud RV Park in the beautiful town of McCloud located just below Mount Shasta. Twenty-six shining works of art rolled in and the fun began. The hosts for this rally were Dan and Gail Crutchfield and Dave and Marget Williams.

On Wednesday, June 9, we started with our regular Happy Hour on the village green behind many of our trailers, with raffle prizes to those with a winning raffle ticket in their goodie bag. (This continued throughout the rally until the prizes were gone.) Several new members were introduced.

We then hosted a welcome dinner at the Siskiyou Brewing Works which was in a red barn, walking distance from the RV park. Our dinner was held outside in the beer garden, with craft beer, salad, and pizza. The pizzas were as large as the appetites. We didn't know there were so many kinds of pizzas, but we enjoyed them all. As a highlight, local NorCal'er Mike Lingsch shared information about the McCloud Region and invited us to a social hour on Friday at his home in McCloud.

On Thursday June 10, a fly-fishing clinic was held in the green area at the RV park led by Steve Irej, Dave Williams, Dan Crutchfield and Marget Williams. All the rods and reels one would ever need to use or own were provided for the casting pleasure of the members. There were approximately 20 members who participated in the session, and all seemed to enjoy it, regardless of skill.

Several who proved to be natural at the sport were encouraged to take their skill to the streams.

There are many good places for fishing in the area, and a few of our members took advantage of them over the weekend. Some did quite well, and others got skunked (like me). That's why they call it fishing and not catching.

The author getting "skunked"

Besides fishing, some members played golf at the local 9-hole golf course that had been built by the lumber company back in the 1920s. They reported their golf play was so-so but they had fun, hoping to catch a glimpse of the elusive Mount Shasta, which remained shrouded with clouds most of our stay.

McCloud Continued

On Friday, as anticipated, we had a wonderful social hour at the lovely home of Mike and Mary Lingsch. I think the barbecued scallops wrapped in bacon were the highlight, but there were many wonderful hors d'oeuvres and drinks to be had by all.

Plus,, we got to tour Mike's "cabin" and his workshop that he built himself over a few years. What a wonderful home and beautiful setting!

Saturday started out with an informal talk on the green by Ray Bell about the adventures and misadventures of boondocking. His was a great talk, filled with interesting antidotes.

Afterward, many of our members toured some of the local attractions, such as the town of Mount Shasta, the little town of Dunsuir, and the nearby McCloud reservoir with a distinct green color due in part to all the volcanic ash.

Several of the members brought their bikes or ebikes, riding the local bike trails and touring the town of McCloud. The town is an old-time company lumber town, so was interesting to ride through.

A major highlight of the trip was the hike leading to and connecting each of the three waterfalls on the McCloud River. Many members took advantage of it and enjoyed a beautiful hike along the river at various elevations.

Later that evening, we were provided with a wonderful barbecued tri-tip, pasta and salad dinner by Raymond Zanni catering. And of course Saturday always brings birthday and anniversary time at the rallies. Juliett Schuey came prepared and was superb at her stand-up comedy routine. (How does a mother know so many dad jokes?)

On Sunday, most of us headed home but some decided to stay around for another couple of days and enjoy the sights. As for us, I guess we will start the diet next week.

Skeptical of Rallies?

So – you receive The Poppy, have read about NorCal rallies and you are still skeptical and/or an introvert who believes you will hate the experience because you will be inundated with pressure to socialize. You are not alone. Rich Luhr, editor of Airstream Life and proprietor of the Airstream Life Store, was just like you. I say “was,” because he recently joined WBCCI, and this year attended the International Rally in Lebanon, TN, where well over 700 participants rallied in their Airstreams. He is now in the “former” category when it comes to skepticism in and fear of attending rallies.

In his recent blog post, which can be read here: https://store.airstreamlife.com/blogs/airstream-life-store-blog/the-return-of-the-rally?mc_cid=1d3742db9c&mc_eid=9ec2cddde4 he says “Rallies are one of the best things about Airstream ownership. If you've never tried a rally, let me tell you—as a former skeptic and a self-professed introvert—rallies are great.”

He says the top reasons to attend a rally include meeting more fellow Airstreamers, getting technical help or advice, exploring areas and local points of interest that you might have overlooked, re-engaging with Airstream friends you have missed during the pandemic (assuming you are vaccinated), and enjoying camaraderie with others, instead of camping anonymously. He also notes that most rallies do not require group participation all the time or when the rally goer prefers to be alone. I can personally attest that he is right on all points. Plus, you typically are able to camp at reduced fees for a week (while this perk lasts.)

Sadly, while a small group of members attend rallies frequently, there is a much larger group who do not attend at all. That is a shame, for they are missing out on one of the joys of Airstreaming – being an active part of an identifiable community with the common interest of Airstreams. If you invest a bit of your time and energy into even one rally or two a year, the investment will pay off in friendship, valuable information gleaned from other's Airstream experiences, the ability to share your experiences, and a fun time investigating different areas of the State. And speaking for our Club, you will not be pressured to attend or participate in any event or activity.

On the flip side, NorCal rally-goers make the effort to ensure that NorCal's rallies are inclusive for everyone, especially new members and new rally goers who may be skeptical and introverted about rallies. The myth that our Club rallies, because we are affiliated with WBCCI, are some huge formal bureaucratic event with many rules, regulations and requirements, is just that – a myth. Many people who are introverts attend NorCal rallies because they feel quite comfortable at them. Perhaps for you, the unhosted Oakdale/Sierra RV Park rally might be a place to start.

Rich Luhr further notes that for those afraid of making the effort to meet new people, sharing food such as baked goods or tasty cooked items with others at your site will make you instantly popular. Another point that I can personally attest is correct. Just ask NorCal member Dean Davidson. He'll be the one greeting you with pizza and whatever else he cooks up in his outdoor kitchen.

An Impromptu Trip Down U.S. 395

A few of us gathered together during the April rally this year in Gilroy and discussed the idea of an impromptu trip down the eastern side of the Sierras on U.S. 395. We all had missed the "cancelled rally" in Lone Pine last June and wanted to do something similar this year. We decided on a route that would take us through Yosemite over the Tioga pass and go south from there to the Alabama Hills near Lone Pine. The passes don't open until late May so we decided a trip in early June would work and, hopefully, allow us to beat the heat in the Owens Valley that can come in the summer.

We found various places to stay overnight near the entrance to Yosemite on CA 120 so that we could all get an early start through the park the next morning. By mid-morning the lineup of vehicles trying to enter the park is quite long as is the wait time. So an early start helped us beat the crowd.

Reservations are required to enter the park unless just passing through. Passers through are given a 2 hour time limit to get out on the other side of the park.

Two hours was plenty of time to drive through Yosemite. We stopped at Olmstead Point to take in the million-dollar view looking over Little Yosemite Valley with Half Dome visible in the background, and at Tenaya Lake that was pristine.

After leaving the park, some of us stopped at the Mobil gas station at the CA120/US385 junction in Lee Vining and had lunch at the Whoa Nellie Deli there. After that we continued to the Mono Vista RV park where we rendezvoused with other travelers. The valley was experiencing severe winds that day so we had to restrict our gatherings to inside our trailers.

Next, we drove with our trailers down to Manzanar National Historic Site near Independence, CA. During WWII more than 10,000 American citizens and residents of Japanese heritage were interred there.

In 2010/11 some of the barracks were reconstructed so that visitors can see what the living conditions were like during the war years. The reconstructed barracks though are built to today's building codes so that they are safe for visitors and are actually quite nicer than those that were there in the 1940s. Families were allocated small sections in the barracks with cots for beds. The American government was kind enough to provide free straw so that the people could stuff their own mattresses made of sewn together sheets. The visitor center just opened the day that we were there after being closed during the pandemic. So we were among the first to enter it in over a year.

Typical barracks quarters for a family

Our trailers parked at Manzanar

Just a bit further down the highway was the town of Lone Pine and the road to Whitney Portal and the Alabama Hills. We had planned to dry camp in the Alabama Hills a few days later but because of an impending heat wave we abandoned that idea. There are no trees in the Alabama Hills, no shade, no water. etc., and the temperature was expected to reach 110 deg F. So we think we made a good choice to drop that idea..

Yoshiko Deiwert in the Alabama Hills

In the town of Lone Pine we visited the Movie Museum which had just recently reopened after being closed due to the pandemic. Many western movies were filmed in the Alabama Hills including those featuring The Lone Ranger, Gene Autry, Tom Mix, Roy Rogers, Hopalong Cassidy, Humphrey Bogart, etc., etc. More recently the setting was used for science fiction films.

Lone Pine Movie Museum

A bit further south of Lone Pine we stopped in at a well advertised beef jerky store (a re-utilized abandoned gas station). We found the beef jerky to be priced at $15 for three ounces (they must have used wagyu) so we passed the opportunity to try it. (At Trader Joes you can buy 4 ounces for 5 or 6 dollars.) Also nearby was a lemon house – rather unique.

Beef jerky store in Olancha

One day we took the Death Valley Road out of Big Pine and drove through a Joshua tree forest (in the Inyo National Forest) past the Eureka Sand dunes and through Hanging Rock Canyon in Death Valley. We met not another soul on the road both going and returning.

Death Valley

After a picnic lunch among the Joshua trees, we visited the Ancient Bristlecone Pine Forest located at an elevation of over 10,000 feet. The oldest living tree found there so far is 4850 years old – the oldest known living thing on earth. The trees have a lot a character and charm and we took a lot of pictures of them. Seeing the trees was actually a highlight of our trip.

We spent four nights in Bishop at the Highlands RV Park and spent another day just exploring around the nearby area. We went to the Keough Hot Springs in the morning and the Laws Railroad Museum in the afternoon followed by having a gelato at Schat's Bakery.

Ancient Bristlecone Pine Tree

An old tavern bar at the Laws Railroad Museum

To avoid the heat wave, we decided to head north to a higher elevation at Mammoth Lakes near Mammoth Mountain and stayed in the Mammoth Lakes resort area. There are several small lakes in the area that are good for fishing and boating recreation and there are miles of hiking and biking trails. We drove over Mammoth Mountain where there is a large ski resort that is usually open for skiing through May.

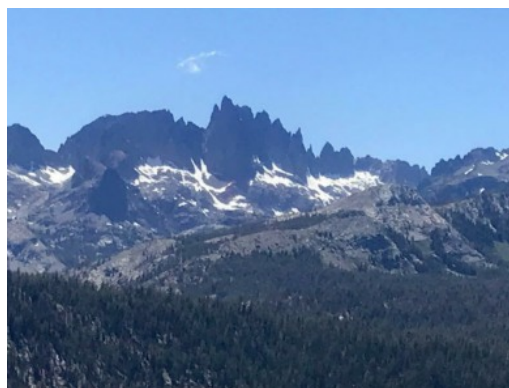

One of the Mammoth Lakes

Past the resort is the entrance to the Devils Postpile National Monument, which features large hexagonal columns of basalt that resulted from a volcanic lava flow a long time ago. The road to the Postpile was closed until mid July so we could not visit. But there were nice views from the entrance area.

Near Devils Postpile entrance

The Minarets

On the eastern side of US 395 is a geothermal area with several natural hot springs. One of the most popular ones is located on the edge of Hot Creek.

Hot Creek - Geothermal area

Many people come to soak in these hot springs and they are free to use. After looking around the Mammoth Lakes area, we dropped in to the Mammoth Brewery for a beer tasting.

We returned home a couple of days earlier than planned in order to get away from the heat (and the air conditioner on one of the Airstream trailers had quit working). But we had a great time nonetheless.

July 15, 2021, their membership is active to July 14, 2022. They are charged one full year of dues for international and local club. This greatly simplifies the process by eliminating prorated dues. HQ will also be able to collect affiliate dues, further simplifying the process.

Finally, we decided to cancel the Quincy Rally due to the ever-expanding Dixie and Fly fires threatening the Quincy area and causing terrible air quality. It is always difficult to cancel rallies, so the decision was not made lightly. We hope to see everyone at Angel's Camp!
