About our Club

The Central Coast California Airstream Club (CCCAC) encompasses the scenic California coastal counties of San Luis Obispo, Santa Barbara, and Ventura; but our members come from all around the area! We are an active, social group that participates in local, regional, and international rallies. We are dedicated to the Creed created long ago by the Airstream founder, Wally Byam. Though Wally has passed, the words and wisdom of his Creed live on in the many Airstream Clubs that remain active to this day. Established on April 10, 1965, we continue to enjoy "Fun, Friendship & Camping."

Presidents Message

Happy 2026 to all of our members and affiliates in the Central Coast California Airstream Club! My name is Tracy Adams and I am honored to be your new club president. My first gentleman, Scott, and our dog, Heidi, have found a beautiful family in this club since joining in July 2021.

If I may reflect upon 2025 for one moment, I'd like to give a BIG thank you to Liz and Barry Marks and Jan and Gary Brant for hosting a wonderful holiday party and business meeting at Sun Outdoors Cava Robles in Paso Robles in December. They arrived before most of us and by the time we got there, all of the decorations and tables were set for about 55 of us. It was a magical time with great food, crafts, games, music and laughter. A special TY to Liz for the endless number of phone calls and emails she made with the park to make sure this was the best rally it could be.

Looking forward to 2026, the club has some business to take care of by updating our Constitution and Bylaws (CBL). It was started last year, but needs to be finalized by our club, then approved by Region 12 leadership and on up the chain of command. We're making minor changes to update recent technology vocabulary upgrades from 5 years ago, and updating job definitions. If you have not seen, read, or heard of our CBL, you can find them here
<https://airstreamclub.org/sites/default/files/2021-06/CCCAC-Constitution-and-Bylaws-2020.pdf>

Other thanks go out to Dave and Donna Gray for creating the Tattler newsletter several times a year. Dave originally volunteered to do the Tattler, along with being our club secretary, but two sets of eyes are better than one, so Donna got roped into being editor and proofreader. I know many hours go into creating this newsletter, so be sure to read it, contribute photos, and write stories about your adventures, or how to fix things, and submit them to Dave at LosOsosDave@gmail.com . Also, if you want your birthday (not the year) to show up in the Tattler, be sure to email Dave that information as well.

This club works because of volunteers like you and me. If you'd like to host the September 2026 rally at Jackson Rancheria, please reach out to me or our newly-elected Vice President, Jim Ellis, at ellisjr31@icloud.com. All other rallies for 2026 are spoken for, thankfully. We will need hosts in 2027 and we'll let you know when we're ready for you to volunteer.

Wishing all of you safe travels in 2026. Don't hesitate to reach out to me with questions, comments or suggestions.

Where do YOU want to go in 2027?

Safe towing speed—How fast is too fast for towing?

By Cheri Sicard

What is a safe towing speed? How fast is too fast to tow? The team at Keep Your Daydream wanted to cover this topic for a long time. That's because they say they frequently get passed by all sorts of RVs, from massive Class A's to SUVs towing single-axle trailers.

That led them to the question, "Is there a right speed to tow?"

To get the answer, they reached out to three RV experts, including JD from Big Truck Big RV, Kenny Brooks from Airstream Trippin', and Eric Johnson from TechnoRV.

In the video below, each of these experienced RVers provided their own thoughts and opinions on the need for speed in all kinds of RVs, from towable travel trailers and 5th wheels to motorized RVs.

Besides talking to the experts, the video also gives some great general towing tips, especially about cruise control, trailer brakes, and using the tow/haul feature on your truck.

According to JD from Big Truck Big RV, it depends on what he is towing and why he is towing it. However, he does admit that when he is towing a fifth wheel, his hard and fast top limit is about 67 miles per hour. Any faster than that and JD just knows he is going faster than he should be, putting undue wear on tires, and generating more heat than is necessary.

When asked how fast is too fast to tow, Kenny of Airstream Trippin' said 70 mph. He keeps his top speed at about 65 mph. When asked why, his simple reply was, "Because I want to arrive alive."

When it comes to how fast to drive or tow with a large motorhome, Eric from TechnoRV says it comes down to your comfort level and common sense. But he does keep interstate speeds to around 65 mph.

Eric also had truck camper experience. He says the top-heaviness of these vehicles makes them more challenging. His top speed was about 58-60 mph with his truck camper. He says he just did not feel safe or comfortable above that speed.

I have to agree with these experts on top speed, and 65 mph is about where I top out when towing my travel trailer. But I am constantly astounded by the motorhomes, travel trailers and 5th wheels, not to mention semi-trucks, that regularly fly by me.

Arizona Camping Caravan

November 2025

Tracy Adams led a caravan of 13 CCCAC Airstreamers on a twelve-day trip through parts of Arizona. We all met at the Desert Hot Springs KOA and stayed for two days, experiencing the mineral hot tubs and a day trip for some to Joshua Tree National Park. Next, we were off to Tucson to stay at the Catalina State park. During our three days stay, we visited the Biosphere 2, a research facility created in the late '80s and early '90s to see if humans could survive in an artificial, self-sustaining ecosystem.

Next stop, Kartchner State Park in Benson, Arizona, adjacent to the Kartchner caverns which were spectacular. After Kartchner we stopped at Tombstone, Arizona, the scene of the OK corral famous shootout, then proceeded to Bisbee, an eclectic old copper mining town. The group took a mine train tour that was quite interesting.

We all thoroughly enjoyed the trip and look forward to many more in the future.

RVers at risk: Expert warns Battle Born lithium batteries are dangerous and unsafe

By Tony Barthel December 18, 2025

YouTuber Will Prowse is known for battery teardowns and evaluating lithium batteries as part of his DIY solar videos on the video platform. But many RVers with Battle Born brand batteries have been circulating a new video of his that shows a potential hazard with the brand's lithium batteries.

In a video entitled "Battleborn 12V Battery: Major Safety Issue," with a featured image of the word "Dangerous" in large letters, Prowse disassembles a battery sent to him by a follower, who said the battery was having issues when charging. Very specifically, the terminal was getting quite hot during charging.

Poor electrical connections cause heat

Poor electrical connections cause heat. One of the worst circumstances in any electrical connection is heat, especially extreme heat. Typically, this is caused by a poor connection.

Many RVers have seen poor connections result in their 30- or 50-amp power cords literally melting, even if they might have an EMS or surge suppressor. In most cases, this is due to a poor connection.

When Prowse cut open the battery the follower had sent him, he found that Battle Born had used an aluminum lug to connect the battery terminal to the breaker bar, which had jiggled loose over time and caused a poor connection. One of the things Prowse mentioned is a suggestion by some owners of these batteries, proffered in various forums, to wiggle the charge terminal until the battery starts charging properly.

Will Prowse on YouTube

DIY Solar Power with Will Prowse, has more than a million followers. The channel is an honest look at a variety of components in the solar world, including RV solar and lithium. While some YouTube channels are highly sensational, Prowse's down-to-earth and knowledgeable take on these things is refreshing.

The initial video was viewed more than 120,000 times in less than a week and prompted a follow-up video by Prowse. He cites a response from Dragonfly Energy/Battle Born batteries, where the company claims this is a failsafe designed to prevent failures and heat. That video beat the original one with more than 178,000 views in just five days.

Prowse read a response from Matthew Adams from Dragonfly Energy/Battle Born to one of his followers describing the "...aluminum nut design as being a purpose-built thermal failsafe. It is engineered so that the plastic deforms and disconnects when excess heat is present at the terminal."

Prowse responded with, "... What in here is disconnecting? That is a failure!" He then tested the battery with a charger and saw arcing inside the battery. "There is arcing inside—that is not a disconnect!" Prowse measured the connection at more than 200°F.

"If a laboratory is passing this as an overcurrent protection device, they need to be investigated," continues Prowse. "This is not a safety feature." "This is 100% an issue."

I have a Hughes Power Watchdog, which I recommend to all RVers. But this device would have done nothing to prevent a fire if this loose connection inside the RV had become hotter or looser and caused a fire.

I have also seen a few people share that loose connections behind their converter had caused heat. As we all know, RVs travel on some pretty awful roads, and it's quite possible that connections get loose. The best practice would be to check connections wherever possible. Also, use a laser heat gun to check for heat, particularly when there is a high draw, such as the shore power connection.

That could be the source of the issue outlined in Prowse's video, where vibrations caused this lug to ultimately come loose and create this heated connection.

My opinions

As mentioned, I would make sure to have a temperature gun with a laser pointer in any RV, as it is. I use these to measure the temperature of wheel hubs, tires, and now electrical connections. Know what's normal, and if you see a change, such as a connection getting hotter than it typically has been, then look at it more closely. Loose connections with electricity are always a problem. Always. If you have this brand of battery, or any brand of battery, measure the connection at the battery terminal while it's being charged. If you see a significant amount of heat, such as what was described in Will Prowse's video, I would immediately contact Battle Born and see what their suggestion is.

As I watched the response from Battle Born, I couldn't help but be reminded of the terrible response to all the frame flex videos and articles surrounding Grand Design and how that company went from having an absolute stellar reputation to one that I think has been called into question by a lot of even long-time fans. Initially, Grand Design denied the claims, then offered a better warranty, and now is touting its new Omega frame and bragging about how much better it is.

Instead of taking the bull by the horns, admitting you have an issue and then working with your fan base to address it, it seems that companies in the RV space deny, deny, deny until they can't deny any longer. That's a terrible way to handle PR. Further, a company with an otherwise stellar reputation like Battle Born could see that erode very quickly.

The Author of this article has reached out to multiple email addresses at Battle Born Battery/Dragonfly and has received no response.
