President's Message

E Pluribus Unum. Out of many, one.

We all know this as a Latin phrase that morphed into a significant symbol in American history and culture. A motto to describe the unification of the original 13 colonies into a single nation. I think of our sacred club in the very same terms. 121 or so local and intra-clubs (out of many) that make up the grand vision of Wally Byam; the WBCCI (one).

This concept couldn't have been made any clearer than two significant activities that I experienced this week. But before I reveal those, let's examine another clue from our high school Civics Class, "all politics is local", coined by former Speaker of the House Tip O'Neill. In that context, meaning that people really only care about the pragmatic things that affect their daily life, versus some abstract national policy. I'll bootleg the term to make my point.

The power of the local club

As members, the local club is that runway where we experience a soft landing. It has a culture and identity, which over time, lead to tradition and the values the club imbues. Successive generations are drawn to a club, because of the foundation that has been built. They eagerly add a new dimension to the club, like the rings of a tree adding strength to its core. In my experience, there is a club for everyone, you just have to stick your neck out and find it!

So, the first dose of good old local club lore came to be when I interviewed President Hollie Bart and Newsletter Editor Barbara Schultz from the Hudson-Mohawk Airstream Club for my series entitled, "What's in a Name." Check it out in this issue of the Region 2 Beat. To refresh some of our new readers, the series was started while I was pondering a way to highlight each of our 12 clubs that comprise Region 2, in a way that was interesting and colorful. By focusing on the origins of a club's newsletter name, we expand that into discussing the history and culture of the selected club. This is the third installment as we have previously covered the Al-Mon-O and Ontario Clubs.

When I finished my hour-long conversation with Hollie and Barbara, I felt like I had a unique window into their club. After all, that's what draws people in, by being hospitable and authentic. I wanted to jump into my F-150, grab the Flying Cloud and head to upstate New York. And it reminded me of why I joined this club in the beginning. We're a family. Let's not forget that.

Now, more on the family front. While I try to leave my personal life out of my writing assignments, it's often hard to ignore, because that's what makes all of us unique. I've struggled with thyroid eye disease for two and half years, and my vision is problematic because of it, causing a hiatus in pulling my own trailer. One of the first angels from the club to show up was 1st VP Matt Moore, who selflessly went out of his way to pull my trailer up to the IR in York last summer. Later, WDCU friends Danee and Kim Alaniz rushed to Virginia from Maryland to winterize my trailer before the November chill set in. Not once, but twice. And did so without favor or fanfare.

But this club has an uncanny ability to not allow despair to set in, through so many unsung heroes, like Matt and the Alaniz's. I'm hopeful that the life-altering surgery that I'll endure next month is successful. It's a pretty complicated operation, but I need it to resume my normal life. I'd be lying if I told you that I wasn't nervous- and my tough guy Jersey persona will not save me from normal human fear! Enter the WDCU, my local home club.

In last month's message, I spoke of "opening day" for many clubs. The Washington DC Unit, or WDCU coins our opening day as the Capital Kick Off Rally, or CKR. So, needless to say, I was thrilled when my WDCU buddy, Treasurer Diane Sheridan, who lives near me in Northern Virginia called. She offered to drive me out to the rally, which was set in the beautiful Blue Ridge Mountains of Virginia. So, roughly three-hours later, we snuck up on my guys at a local ice cream joint. While the word of my pending attendance kind of got out, it did not dampen the excitement I experienced when seeing my friends. And it took all of my tough guy persona not to tear up. The local club at its best. Hanging out under an awning, shopping for a dessert for the potluck, and just being, together that's it. Enjoying the camaraderie, the food, the fellowship. Our unique sense of humor, the love, the friendship, THE FAMILY. And families have that internal countenance that insists on tracking your travels. So, at 70 years of age, I dutifully texted my friends, notifying them that I made it home safely. At almost 10 pm! A big day out! Thank you, Diane!

Many thanks to WDCU President Lisa Lichtenstein for leading our wonderful local club and hosting the rally and to all my bandmates for being the family that guides me through these golden years. And to Hollie Bart and her team, for making me feel part of their group in a Zoom call!

So, let's make Spring and these first few rallies as an homage to the Local Club. And with that, I hope that all of our members find family wherever their travels take them.

See you down the road!

Patti

Making Registrations Easier for Everyone

One of the biggest improvements we've seen across Region 2 is the use of online tools to simplify rally registration and communication.

Platforms like Jotform and PayPal have made it easier than ever to collect information, manage attendees, and handle payments –all in one place. That means less paperwork, fewer emails to track, and a smoother experience for both hosts and attendees.

If you're planning an event, consider:

- Using online forms to gather registrations and meal choices
- Linking payment options directly within your form
- Keeping all responses organized in one central location

For members, these tools also make signing up quick and convenient—no stamps or checks required.

As always, be sure to use secure links and only share forms through official Region or club communications.

Embracing these tools helps us spend less time on logistics—and more time enjoying the rally experience.

Campfire Cuisine: Simple Meals That Make the Rally

One of the best parts of any rally isn't on the schedule—it's what's cooking. From shared meals to impromptu happy hours, food has a way of bringing everyone together and turning a good rally into a great one.

The good news? You don't need a full kitchen setup to make something memorable.

Keep It Simple

Rally days are busy, so simple meals are the way to go. Think one-pan dishes, foil packets, or anything you can prep ahead of time. Less time cooking means more time enjoying the company around you.

Fan Favorites to Try

- Foil Packet Meals - Toss in chicken or sausage, potatoes, and veggies, season well, and let the campfire do the work
- Cast Iron Classics - Breakfast hash, grilled sandwiches, or even cobbler for dessert
- Easy Apps - Cheese trays, dips, or sliders are perfect for sharing during happy hour

The Potluck Advantage

If your rally includes a potluck, take advantage of it. It's a chance to try new dishes, share a favorite recipe, and connect with fellow members. And let's be honest—Region 2 knows how to eat well.

Don't Forget the Fun

Sometimes it's not about the meal itself, but the story behind it. The dish that didn't quite turn out right. The one that disappeared in minutes. Or the friendly competition for "best in show."

More Than Just a Meal

At the end of the day, campfire cooking is about more than food—it's about gathering, sharing, and creating moments that stick long after the rally ends.

So next time you pack up for a trip, throw in that cast iron pan or your favorite recipe. You might just become the highlight of the next happy hour.

What's In A Name? - Patti Galupo, Region 2 President

We live in an age of hipster acronyms. You know the deal, the SoHo neighborhood in New York City really means the neighborhood "South of Houston (street)." Tribeca is the "triangle below Canal (street)". So, when I got an email from President Hollie Bart of the Hudson-Mohawk Airstream Club, she put in the subject line- "HudMo Call." I thought, now that's cool."

And so it began, the road to determining the origins of HudMo's newsletter, "The Navigator." Now, I must admit, my mind was swarming with all kinds of notions of the Hudson-Mohawk name, was it directly related to the Indian tribes that first settled in North America? I knew a little about the Iroquois tribes in that area of New York and Canada and we all know about the Hudson River. But Hollie and Newsletter Editor Barbara Schultz finally tied up all the loose ends. The Hudson and Mohawk Rivers converge just north of Troy, NY, near Waterford. And that geography became the identifier of an Airstream Club. The "Navigator" meaning has a bit of a twist, many of the early members of Hudson-Mohawk were Navy veterans, so alas, we combine that with the mighty Hudson River, and navigating such a major thoroughfare, and there we have it.

Here's some more Org Chart trivia. See below pictures of two Charters for the club. They have two iterations. Apparently, in the early years of the WBCCI, way back when it wasn't incorporated and simply the WBCC (Wally Byam Caravan Club), The State of New York had one club, the New York Unit. Hudson-Mohawk was a mere subsidy or chapter of the New York Unit. Of course, a little competition is good for everybody, and our country is known for fighting for our independence, so Hudson-Mohawk became its own Unit, later morphing in the Airstream Club title.

Now, let's dive into the culture of the club. These guys are true foodies and are known for their competitive spirit. That comes in the form of a chili-cook off competition. And an hors d'oeuvres stand-off, all for the grand prize of a wooden spoon!

But these guys have also mastered camping equipment lore with their competitive spirit. And, a great sense of humor. If you have an unused or new sewage hose in the bumper of your trailer, keep it in a pristine condition, because HudMo is going to swap frisbee golf with a sewage hose throw! Where do I sign up?

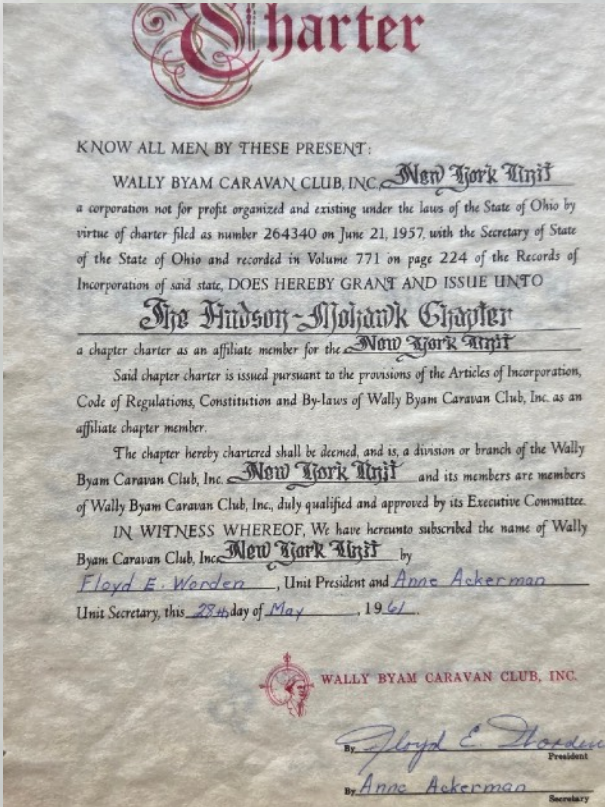

HudMo takes advanced education very seriously, and trains their members in many useful tasks, they developed a Men's Only Craft Hour. Yes, you heard it right here! Somebody they knew developed a latch for the "garage door", or storage compartment, that the men absolutely raved about and took quite seriously. So, no more heading up I-87 worrying about that pesky latch opening up! They then lightened the load by hosting a pajama contest somewhere in a wagon wheel formation while boondocking in the Catskills. Don't you wanna go camping with these guys?

And shhhhh...don't tell anybody, but HudMo is also known for their decorative centerpieces. See the handiwork in the below captioned picture. They seem to have a penchant for collecting little souvenirs, and a knack to transform them into an art form.

After a full hour of laughing and soaking up our mutual love of all things WBCCI, one cannot walk away without thinking that these guys take great pride in their club and aim to enjoy life while doing it. I can't wait to head to their next PJ party. And many thanks to President Bart and Editor Schultz for taking the assignment seriously. The love you have for your club and each other is evident!

And to close this out, Barbara Schultz was delighted to quote a former long-time member, Sue Whittle, a 40-year vet of HudMo who so aptly stated,

'WE'RE THE LITTLE CLUB THAT COULD.'

Below - The charter recognizing the Hudson-Mohawk Unit as their own organization.

On the Road Again: Don't Overlook Your Brakes

When it comes to towing safely, few systems are as critical—and as often overlooked—as your Airstream's brakes. Whether you're heading to a weekend rally or crossing multiple states, properly functioning brakes are what keep your travels smooth, controlled, and stress-free.

Unlike your tow vehicle, most Airstreams use electric drum brakes, which require periodic inspection and maintenance. The good news? With a little attention each season, you can avoid costly repairs and ensure everything is working as it should.

Why Brake Maintenance Matters

Trailer brakes don't just help you stop—they reduce strain on your tow vehicle, improve control on hills, and provide stability in emergency situations. Worn or poorly adjusted brakes can lead to:

- Longer stopping distances
- Uneven braking or pulling to one side
- Overheating and damage to hubs or bearings
- Increased wear on your tow vehicle

If you've noticed any of these symptoms, it's time to take a closer look.

When Should You Check Your Brakes?

A good rule of thumb is to inspect your brakes:

- At least once a year
- Every 10,000-12,000 miles
- Before any long trip or rally season

If your Airstream has been sitting over the winter, a pre-season check is especially important.

What to Look For

When you remove the wheel and brake drum, inspect the following:

- Brake Shoes - Look for uneven wear or thinning of the lining
- Magnets - Check for excessive wear or scoring
- Wiring - Ensure connections are secure and free of corrosion
- Drum Surface - Watch for grooves, cracks, or heat spots

If anything looks questionable, it's better to address it now than on the road.

Adjusting vs. Replacing

Not every brake issue means a full replacement. In many cases, your brakes may simply need adjustment.

•Adjustment: If braking feels weak but components are in good shape, tightening the star wheel can restore proper contact.

•Replacement: If the brake shoes are worn down or components are damaged, a full replacement is the safer route. Many owners opt to replace the entire backing plate assembly for simplicity.

If you're comfortable with basic mechanical work, this can be a DIY project. Otherwise, a qualified RV technician can handle it quickly.

Don't Forget the Brake Controller

Your in-cab brake controller is just as important as the hardware on the trailer. Before hitting the road:

- Test brake response at low speed
- Adjust gain settings for smooth, even braking
- Make sure the connection plug is clean and secure

A Little Maintenance Goes a Long Way

Brake maintenance isn't the most glamorous part of Airstreaming—but it's one of the most important. Taking the time to inspect and maintain your braking system helps ensure that every trip—whether it's across Region 2 or across the country—is as safe and enjoyable as possible.

So before your next adventure, give your brakes the attention they deserve. Your future self (and your tow vehicle) will thank you.

More Than the Miles: Why We Rally

Ask ten members why they attend rallies, and you'll likely get ten different answers. Some come for the travel. Others for the destinations. But if you spend any time around a circle of Airstreams, it quickly becomes clear—the real reason we rally goes far beyond the miles.

It Starts with the Journey

There's something special about towing out to a rally site. The anticipation builds with every mile, knowing that at the end of the road is more than just a campsite—it's a community. Whether it's your first rally or your fiftieth, that feeling never quite goes away.

Then Comes the Connection

Rallies have a way of turning acquaintances into friends and friends into family. Morning coffee turns into shared stories. A simple happy hour becomes an evening of laughter. And before you know it, you're planning the next trip together.

It's these connections that define Region 2. Across clubs, across states, across borders, and across generations, we continue to build something that's hard to describe—but easy to feel.

Traditions That Stick

Every club has them. The potlucks, the games, the friendly competitions, and yes—the traditions that may seem a little quirky from the outside. But those are often the moments people remember most.

They become the stories we tell. The reasons we come back.

Learning Along the Way

Rallies are also one of the best classrooms you'll ever find. Need help with a repair? Curious about a modification? Wondering how someone set up that perfect campsite? Just ask.

The willingness to share knowledge is one of the strongest threads in our community—and one that keeps new members coming back.

Why It Matters

In a world that often feels busy and disconnected, rallies give us a chance to slow down and reconnect—with each other and with the simple joy of the road.

So whether you come for the destinations, the activities, or just the chance to unwind, remember—it's not just about where you go.

It's about who you meet along the way.

And that's what keeps us coming back.
